From the London Papers, July 10.

Hague, July 3. In an affembly of the States on the 28th of June, the Prince of Orange, in a speech to their High Mightinesses, sets forth, That he judged it necessary to reprefent to them how proper it would be to examine, if, fince the commencement of the present troubles, proper care had been taken to put the marine upon such a fasting, that it might be able to act with effect against an enemy, and especially one so strong by sea as the kingdom of Crist Britan is; and if any negligence has appeared, to inquire to what it is owing; and in order to receive the necessary information on that head, to write to the different Admiralizes to deliver in an account of write to the different Admiralties to differe in an account of the navy of this republic from a 776 to this time, and what is the cause that these provinces are now in so deployable a state of desence by sea. His Highness goes on to say, that although he mentions the navy at the sist point to be considered, yet he does not mean to infer, that the ladd forces are upon the respectable storing they ought to but that with regard to himself, he has done every thing in his power to put this republic in a respectable state of desence, as the different proposals he has made in that assembly could sufficiently testify. The Prince concludes with swing, that he rould do no other than with the concludes with faying, that he rould do no other than wish the proposals he had made had been approved by their High Mightinesses, being well assured, that if the republic had in time fitted out 50 or 60 men of war, and augmented their land forces to 50 or 60,000 men, they would not have been in their prefent difagreeable fituation, but might have remained respected by all the powers of Encope, might have preserved their syftem of neutrality, and, under the divine benediction, might have been properly prepared against any furprife; and, indeed, fo powerful might the republic have been, that her friendship would have been fought after by the different powers. In short, these provinces would not have been attacked by an unjust war, but would have been in a furnioh to have faced the enemy with hopes of success and of obliging them to have come to honourable terms with them again.

This morning dispatches were received at Lord George Ger-This morning dispatches were received at Lord George Germain's office, from his Excellency General Haldimand, Governor of Quebec.— They do not bring any very interesting intelligence, and contain nothing material, further than that the British government is in perfect state of security in that quarter; that the garrison is in no danger of an attack from the Colonists, and that all were in perfect good health. The dispatch further informs his Lordship, that the Cork victuallers, which were some time ago reported to have fallen into the hands of the enemy, were all arrived safe, without the loss of a single ship.

Yesterday afternoon a messenger arrived at the Admiralty, with dispatches from Vice-Admiral Darby, dated Torbay the 7th instant, acquainting their Lordships of his arrival there that morning with his Majesty's seet under his command, in order the receive the supplies of provisions and stores from on board the victuallers and store-ships, which had previously arrived there for the use of his squadron. The Vice-Admiral adds, that he expects to be joined immediately by the several ships from Portsmouth and Plymouth belonging to the western squadron, after which he shall not lose a moment's time in putting to sea again in search of the French sleet, which has lately sailed from Brest under the command of Mons. de Cnichen

The reason for delaying the failing of Admiral Digby's fleet for America, is wholly owing to the anxiety of Government, to have fresh dispatches from America or the West-Indies, before the departure of that officer.

To the Printer of the Calconian Mercury.

THE people of this city and neighbourhood have lately been amufed with the pleafing fight of a very namerous fleet in the Frith of Forth. This, however, though pleafing to spectators, was a real loss to the proprietors, and, in some measure, to the nation in general. There were few, perhaps, amids the delight afforded by so grand a prospect, who did not mix a sentiment of regret, that so considerable a part of the constraints should have been put to so server as a part of the community should have been put to so great an expence, and lost so much of their time at this season of the year.

I own, Sir, that the fight of so many thips of war, and that, too, almost in our very harbours, could not fail to make us feel a little bold, especially, as we are surrounded with enemies numerous and powerful; but still, though this was to us a ground of safety, we could not be so selfish as not to feel for many a poor individual, who must have suffered consideration.

I was led into these reflections by the sight of mother object of national defence, which I beheld with pleasure, and where there was no cause for any sentiment of pity or regret to make the least deduction from the satisfaction it afforded me. Knowing, Sir; that there was a Camp erected in the neigh-bourhood of Dunbar, I was anxious to fee an object which to me was altogether new: I therefore determined to take a ride to it, to gratify my curiofity. To fay truth, Sir, I was highly pleafed with the neathefa, and even elegance, of the whole:
But the pleafure I received from this was much inferior to what I felt from observing the good order and regularity which appeared throughout the Camp.

attendance and attention are such as to procure his Grace the love and gratitude of his countrymen, and a respect beyond what the highest titles and exalted rank are able to procure; but his Grace's merit and patriotism neither need nor can rebut his Grace's merit and patriotism neither need for than re-ceive any additional suffre from my obscure quilt at was at Camp on Sunday, and orders were given for arrendance on divine fervice. The foldiers were formed into a large circle, in which his Grace and the rest of the officers stood, during the time of worship. Dr Grieve, who is Chaplain to the had a temporary pulpit erected, and delivered (from 2. Timo-thy, 3d chap, and last clause of 4th verse,) a very sensible and judicious discourse, well suited to all men, at all times, especially to those who are entrusted with the public protection of their country, in these times of national danger and alarm. I noticed such a decency of deportment during divine for-rice, and fuch marks of attention and devotion, as would have worthy of an age more religious than the prefent. Upon the whole, I was so much pleased with the Camp, and every thing I saw, that you may believe I was happy in having made fuch an excursion.

The great beauty and conveniencies of these two chates are well known. The rents of both are a good deal higher at present than at the time the judicial rentals were taken up. Great part of them are also in grass and high condition; from which, and the vicinity to the town of Duntermine, a turther advance of ment may be expected. There is no value put upon a substantial convenient mansson-house on Pitteneries, nor a complete set of new elegant office-house, pigeon-house, and truit-wall, which have lately cost above 12001, nor on the reserved coal and iron-stone in the greatest part of the lands. The ereferved coal and iron-frome in the greatest part of the lands. The effate of Lusear has a separate freehold-qualification, on which the proprietor is inrolled; and the valued rent of Pitteneries is nearly equal to three qualifications. The land tax and other consequential burdens are three qualifications. The land remarkably low on both estates.

The proven value of this lot, and at which it is to be for my is a follows: it is to be fet up, is as follows, viz.

The Collier L. 1000 0. 0 Farm of Wester Rosyth, Windylaw and Glebe leafes,

Proven value of lot 3d, L. 6522 18 ro
The collieries contain inexhaustible quantities, and of the best qualities, of the three great kinds of coal known in the island, viz. The large open Scots and Hartly kind, the Newcastle or rich running fort, and the Welch or stone kind without smoke, which fell, for drying malt, at aweight of the price of other coals, and the finall or refuse of these coals (except the Newcattle, or running kind) passed coastwife as culm, at the low duty of 12 d. a chalder, which is a very great advantage to a large colliery.

The two first forts have water-levels drove up to them, at a very great expence, which are capable of clearing many millions of tons. In fome of the fields there are feven feams already discovered, from two to some of the decks there are feven feams already introvered, from two to eight feet thick, at the deeph of only 30 fathom from the furface; and, in the opinion of the most fkilful persons, no coals can be wrought and laid on the bank at less expense. The distance of the works from the harbour is from two and a half to four English miles, and the ground will admit of a convenient waggon-way. There is eighteen feet water at ordinary fpring-tides in the harbour, and the depth may be increased by ordinary ipring tides in the harbour, and the depth may be increased by extending the pier, which has flome quarries juft by it.

The furface of coal and iron-grounds, including the effate of Wester Baldridge, and some large feus, is 1000 acres, or thereabouts.
